INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

By the Board of Trustees

Park College is located in the village of Parkville on the K. C., St. J. & C. B. R. R., nine miles above Kansas City, of which metropolis a train service of eleven trains a day makes it practically a suburb. The College buildings, as a rule, have been located upon the bluffs overlooking the Missouri River. The hills have been terraced to receive them by student labor, and from every standpoint of beauty and of health, the location is an ideal one. It is now thirty years since Park College had its humble beginnings that were visible to the world. In fact its beginnings date back much further than 1875. For many years two men, unknown to each other, had felt the same need, and tried to meet it. The need is tersely expressed in the following paragraph from the charter expressing the purpose of the Founders of Park College:

"The object of this corporation shall ever be, to "diffuse knowledge, moral and religious principles, "in the most practical and effectual manner. To af- "ford the advantages of training and education to the "youth of both sexes, of the country; to give especi- "ally facilities to the youth found worthy and not hav- "ing sufficient means, who may be inured to hard- "ship, to obtain an education by labor or otherwise."

In June, 1850, Geo. S. Park, one of the pioneer settlers of the Platte Purchase, laid out a tract of land as a "college site." Col. Park had been a faithful elder, and active worker in all Christian lines for many years in that locality. Keenly observant and interested in the progress of affairs, he saw the moral and mental desert about him. He saw the aggressive spirit of the Catholic church and the strenuous effort to occupy the point of vantage—working, studying, praying over these problems, he became convinced that great good could be done, great success and stability attained, by an institution of learning whose principal object should be the study of the Scriptures and practical drill in methods of Christian work. He felt that an institution could be a success based:

I. Upon the study of the Bible.

II. A course in the liberal arts for mental development and broad culture.

III. A practical training in all those things needed in the common walks of life. In short, that an institution that added to learning instruction in the Christian virtues, and to those economy and wisdom in the every-day affairs of life, was, under careful direction and supervision, bound to succeed.

The college site laid out in 1850 remained but a site for many years. The anti-slavery agitation, especially to the admission of Kansas as a state, became violent, and Mr. Park, who championed the right of Kansas to decide for herself the question of slavery, was for the time driven from his home, his property wrecked, and his printing press thrown into the river by the mob. Returning, however, before the civil war, he was yet delayed in his plans by the war and disorder following its termination. In 1872, however, he went to Platte Presbytery with these plans and offers of buildings, money and lands. The offer was not accepted, but it was the seed that bore as its fruit, Park College. The offer became widely known, and God raised up a helper for the work.

Rev. John A. McAfee, D. D., having worked his way through college, began immediately seeking a way to meet the same need which had impressed Mr. Park. His own experience fitted him to enter into sympathy with those who were debarred from an education by lack of money. His early efforts were signally successful in the quality of men and women trained for Christian service, but from a financial standpoint were prophecies of failure There would have been failure, but that a God-given idea cannot be crushed. He realized, as perhaps few men do, that God had ordained him to special work. Difficulties sprang up at every threshold, and in some form held place until the pearly gates were lifted, and he was ushered into the mansion of heavenly rest and certainty. But to him the command to "Go forward" was never recalled. In 1875 these two men, Geo. Shepard Park and Rev. John A. McAfee met; and each recognizing in the other a kindred spirit combined their forces in the establishment of Park College. With the same purposes and ideals in view they in a wonderful degree supplemented each other. The one conservative and with unerring business instinct. The other enthusiastic, and capable of arousing enthusiasm in others. Great in planning and persistent to accomplish. Both devoted to the work at hand.

Both men were called from their earthly labors before seeing a large measure of success.

It was a dark day for Park College when on June 9, 1890, we stood around Mr. Park's grave and paid our tearful homage to one who had conceived and cherished throughout a long life the idea of the institution. Just one week from that day, June 16th, 1890, we stood beside Dr. McAfee's grave. Associated for fifteen years in developing and establishing the peculiar educational idea for which Park College stands, they were called to their reward within one week. "They rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

From that time the work has been in the hands of the Board of Trustees, with the loyal and efficient service of *Mrs. Dr. McAfee and her children, all of whom are now engaged in the work. What the growth has been must be told in a few words.

The work of instruction, begun May 12th, 1875, with 20 students enrolled, has continued until now the attendance by actual count is 427. In 1879 the first class was graduated and without exception a class has been sent forth every year since that time until the roll of graduates now numbers 520. And this, too, with a degree of A. B., based upon a curriculum of study and requirement as high as other colleges having only the course of liberal arts. It would occupy too much space to attempt a resume of the progress or give the present status of the college, although such will be gladly furnished on request and may appear to some extent elsewhere in this catalogue. To sum up in a few words, Park College is now on an enduring foundation. She offers first class facilities in buildings, equipment, curriculum of studies and faculty to those desirous of obtaining a thorough education, and to those who are unable to obtain an education except by the aid of their own exertions aside from study she offers an opportunity if the conditions be met. To all, she offers the advantages to be derived from a Christian environment.

*Mrs. McAfee died February 6, 1903.

GENERAL STATEMENTS

Buildings

The stone building, which for many years was the only home of Park College, has been reconstructed and remodeled. It is now used for dormitories for young men and bears the name of Woodward Hall, in memory of the late Rev. Geo. S. Woodward.

McCormick Chapel was erected in 1887. Here the religious exercises of the institution are held. The Presbyterian Church of the village also uses it for public worship. It has a seating capacity of nine hundred.

Mackay was begun in 1887, and was occupied March 13th, 1893. It is a stone building, three stories and a basement. The third floor is arranged for Literary Society Halls and Lecture Halls. The first and second floors are used for lecture rooms. In the basement are located the Biological and Chemical Laboratories. Thirty-two desks in the Biological Laboratory are equipped with compound and dissecting microscopes, dissecting cases, and other accessories necessary for thorough biological study. The Chemical Laboratory accommodates thirty-two students and is fitted with the usual re-agents and equipment.

The Charles Smith Scott observatory was erected and equipped in 1898 by Mr. Anthony Dey, of New York City. The equipment consists of an eight inch equatorial, with the usual attachments of micrometer, helioscope and full set of eye pieces; a four and one half inch equatorial, a combined transit and zenith telescope of a three inch aperture; a chronograph and sidereal clock. The latter is of German manufacture and was imported expressly for the College.

The institution has six dormitories and homes for students, eleven cottages occupied by members of the faculty and those directly connected with the work of the institution.

Financial provision has been made during the past year for the erection of four new buildings. Labor Hall is well on the way to completing. It contains a swimming pool 30x60, shower baths and an ample supply of lockers, with office headquarters for Student Self-Help Department. Grading has been done for a residence for the President. The building will soon be under way. The plans have been accepted for a young woman's Dormitory, which it is hoped will be completed during the year. A generous gift has been received from Mr. Andrew Carnegie for a Library Building. Plans are being perfected for its construction during the season.

The Museum

A start has been made toward a Museum of Natural History. The available space in the second floor hall, the office, and the Biology room is occupied by cases and the curios and specimens at hand are in place, the majority of them being classified. These collections include a human skeleton, also of the cat and frog, skulls of the sheep, horse and fish, three type specimens of each class of invertebrates; together with eggs of the fish and sea-urchin. The insect cabinet contains one thousand local insects, among which are seven hundred Lepidoptera and two hundred Coleoptera, with several rare specimens from New York and California. Many of these are duplicates.

Botany is represented by fifty native wood sections, and by an herbarium of the plants of New York, the gift of S. J. Teran, with the early summer flora of Missouri.

The educational series of rocks furnished by the U. S. Geological Survey includes one hundred and fifty rocks, minerals and fossils from all parts of the country, carefully arranged and labeled. With these appear some local Geodes and Lamellibranches. A few very valuable specimens of gold and silver ores, some beautiful abilone shells, corals and Echinoderms from the Pacific have been recently donated by Mrs. Geo. Lawrence in memory of her son, Park.

Park graduates on the Mission fields have generously favored their Alma Mater. Rev. Frank D. Hickmans collection of African weapons, musical instruments, household utensils, wearing apparel, rosaries and idols, is an object of interest. Rev. Hugh Taylor, Miss Jeanie H. McClure, Miss Elsie J. Bates, Miss Mary M. Palmer and others have contributed Siamese coin and models. Rev. Jas. Rennie has added some rare Colorado minerals, and Mrs. Ida Muir Snyder's collection of minerals from southwest Missouri is a valuable one.

Extensive travel is permitted to very few, but every new addition to our Museum brings nearer the countries and peoples across the sea, and the distant parts of our own land with its varied flora and fauna. Any gifts of cabinets or specimens our friends may see fit to bestow will be greatly appreciated and enjoyed.

Literary Societies

In addition to the work of the departments of English and Literature, Literary Societies have been organized. Students are urged to take membership in these organizations, and secure the benefits of the voluntary literary work afforded by them. The young men and women meet separately. They have their own halls and furniture. At their weekly meetings the usual literary programs are rendered. At stated intervals during the year joint open sessions are given. An inter-society debate is made a valuable feature of each term's work. The regular meetings are limited to members of the societies, and a strict adherence to parliamentary usages is insisted upon.

The Oratorical Association

The Oratorical Association was organized in 1888, as a part of the Inter-Collegiate Association of the State. Local contests are held each fall, at which an orator is chosen to represent the college at inter-collegiate contests. We won first place in 1897 in the Inter-Collegiate, thereby securing a place in the Inter-State, where first place was accorded our representative. First place was again won in the Inter-Collegiate in 1903 and in 1904, and second place in 1905.

Daily Chapel

The Chapel Assembly held each school day in McCormick Chapel at one o'clock is a required service. The Chapel period is thirty minutes. Avail is taken of the opportunity to drill in chorus singing. College and other secular songs are often employed as well as church hymns and the gospel songs. A passage of scripture of greater or less length is read or recited in concert or response each day. It is understood that each student shall be supplied with a hymn book and Bible. The "talks" are topical rather than expository of the scripture, though the passage usually has some near or remote connection with the line of remark.

This Assembly furnishes a daily opportunity for the college life to flow to a common center. The most of the business meetings of the almost numberless student organizations are held during a few unoccupied moments in the college programme immediately following this general gathering. The various events and features of the general college programme are much discussed at the assembly. The aim is to induce by every means the entire body to feel a genuine community of interest in the college life, and to keep the standards of life toned up by an appeal to moral and religious principles.

A most important feature of the assembly is the opportunity offered and zealously sought to bring before the whole body, speakers from abroad. Friends in the neighboring cities and travelers passing our way have been most generous in their response to the invitations to meet the faculty and students on this occasion. Reference to the list of college speakers and lecturers published elsewhere in this catalogue will give some notion of the wealth of these privileges. Members of the faculty often appear also in this capacity as college speakers to the great pleasure and profit of all.

Library and Reading Room

In the absence of a building adapted and equipped for the purpose, two rooms in Mackay have been set apart for the Library and Reading Room. They are large, well lighted and ventilated, and furnished with conveniences for reading and study in quiet.

The reading room is well supplied with current magazines and papers, having on file thirty-five monthlies, twenty-four weeklies, and five dailies. Among these will be found the principal illustrated magazines, both weekly and monthly, which are preserved for binding; the leading religious papers of the Presbyterian church, with several from other denominations; Y. M. C. A. and missionary literature, and helps on the Sabbath School lessons.

The reference library contains about 15,000 volumes. Its most important element is the gift of Mr. Stanley R. McCormick, who not long ago generously placed $4200 at the disposal of the college for library material. This sum was expended under the direction of the heads of the different departments; a large number of volumes was added from many sources; and as a result the college has a library which, for the practical use of college students, has no superior in the state.

The library also contains about 350 bound volumes of magazines and about 8,000 unbound magazines and pamphlets.

The library is classified on the Dewey decimal system, with card index on the dictionary plan, and receives the constant attention of the librarian and assistants. Subject to ordinary regulations its advantages are shared not only by the faculty and students but also by the community at large.

The text-book department forms a large and important division of the library. With few exceptions the text-books used in the classes are owned by the college and are loaned to the students to be returned when no longer in classroom use. In this way the expense of buying books is lifted from a large body of students, and the use of the books is distributed through several successive classes.

Government

1. The general requirements and restrictions of the Faculty apply to all students of the institution.

2. Tobacco, liquor, cards or games of chance and profane language are forbidden. This requirement is in force as long as a student retains connection with the institution; absence from Parkville does not release from it.

3. Students are expected to attend at least one church service and one Sabbath School session each Sabbath. Weekly reports are made at the office of the President and unexcused absences will be reckoned in the markings of the year.

4. Students may find boarding places in the village with families where the following conditions are met:

(a)—Daily family worship is maintained.

(b)—The lady of the house will become responsible for the observance of the study hours, beginning with seven o'clock each evening.

(c)—She will not allow her lady boarders to accept the company of gentlemen except when permitted by the Preceptress.

DEPARTMENT STATEMENTS

POLITICAL ECONOMY

Prof. James M. Matthews

Economics.—Three hours, first term, Junior year. A thorough acquaintance is found with the principles underlying the science, and an analysis is made of the constitution of modern industrial Society. No specific text-book is used. Lectures, supplemented by extensive reading and free discussions constitutes the work of this course.

Economic History. Two hours, second term, Junior year. The industrial history of Europe and the United States is studied as a basis for an intelligent interpretation of our present economic conditions. Text-book and references.

Political Institutions.—Two hours, first term, three hours second term, Junior year. A study is made of the governments of the leading nations of ancient, mediaeval, and modern times. The State by Woodrow Wilson is used as a guide, and is supplemented by references and discussions.

Municipal Government.—Two hours, third term, Junior year. A comparative study is made of the governments of American and European cities, special attention being given to municipal ownership, poor laws, office-holders, etc. Lectures, discussions and references.

International Law.—Three hours, third term, Junior year. The history and character of International Law are considered, followed by an exposition of the rules that generally govern the modern states in their intercourse. Lectures and references.

HISTORY

Prof. James M. Matthews

General History.—Required of all students during the first term Sophomore, five hours a week. Myer's text-book is used as an outline for the study of the great historical movement since the fall of Rome. Lectures and assigned readings, with essays, supplement the text-book work.

English History.—Required subject for the third term of Sophomore year. Larned's text furnishes a basis for the term's work. The leading facts are studied with care and an accurate knowledge of English institutions with their relation to world-history is attempted. Written reviews, collateral reading, outlines and essays, form an essential part of the work.

History of Education.—Seeley's History is used with Compayre, Painter and other works of reference.

American History.—Students may elect this course for the first term Junior. A text-book is used to furnish an outline, but constant use is made of our well equipped library. Independent investigation and criticism are stimulated, the results of which are presented in notes, briefs and dissertations.

European History.—During the second term Junior year those who elect American History as above study the contemporaneous history of Europe, using the same method in so far as it is possible and practicable.

History of Civilization.—An elective for second term Senior. Guizot's Lectures on the History of the Civilization of Modern Europe, supplemented by lectures, parallel readings and theses, are studied. A philosophical discussion of the elements of civilization, with their influence upon society, is attempted.

History of American Politics.—This course is required three hours per week during the second term Senior year. Johnston's American Politics is the text used. Collateral reading in American history and biography is outlined and required.

GERMAN

Prof. Harlan A. Hepfinger

German is required two hours per week for the second term, and three hours for third, Freshman. It then becomes elective for three consecutive terms beginning with the Sophomore. A thorough grammatical and reading knowledge is aimed at and with this is combined work in prose composition. The work varies from year to year but a general outline would be as follows:

First term:—Joynes-Meissner's Grammar, Part I; Brandt's Reader.

Second term:—Grammar, Part I reviewed and Part II; Brandt's Reader continued; Schiller's Wilhelm Tell. Sight reading; Höher als die Kirche, Onkel und Nichte, Das Kalte Herz or some such work taken from Heath's Modern Language Series.

PHYSICS AND CHEMISTRY

Prof. Howard A. Dean

Physics.—The course in Physics is required of the Sophomore students, four hours per week during the fall term, and may be elected throughout the year. Gage's Principles of Physics is used as a text, supplemented by lectures, references and demonstrations as time will permit. The entire ground of this text is covered during the year. The apparatus in this department makes it possible to demonstrate nearly all the important phenomena and the reference library enables the student to obtain a thorough general knowledge of the subject.

General Chemistry.—Required in the Sophomore year, eight hours per week during the winter term. The more common elements are studied and special attention given to chemical laws together with the properties and occurrence of the elements.

Newell's Descriptive Chemistry, part 1, is used as a text with part 2 as a laboratory guide. The Laboratory accommodates thirty-two students and is fitted with the usual reagents and appurtenances. Fees vary from one to two dollars.

A course in qualitative analysis eight hours per week is offered as an elective in the spring term of the Sophomore year. The course is outlined from Fresenius. It is designed to be of use to medical students and to give a good general knowledge of metals, their properties, and, to some extent, their metallurgy.

RHETORIC

Prof. J. Hamilton Lawrence

The work in this department is required of Freshmen and Sophomores and an elective is offered to Seniors. The purpose of the entire course is to secure for the student greater ease, accuracy, and elegance in the use of English. This end is sought in two ways: first, by studying the principles of composition as they are given in the text-book and as they have been vitalized by the great prose writers, and second, by constant practice in writing themes. The emphasis is placed upon the latter.

The Elements of Vocal Expression.—A study in correct breathing, inflection, emphasis and action. First Term, Freshman.

English Composition.—A study of the forms of discourse with reference to structure and style. Genung's Practical Rhetoric. Weekly themes. Second and Third Terms, Freshman.

Argumentation.—A study of the principles and methods of Conviction and Persuasion. Baker's text is followed. Frequent exercises in brief writing and debating. First Term, Sophomore.

English Prose.—An inductive study of the principles of Style and Invention as they appear in the great prose. Bacon, Milton, Addison, Macaulay, Ruskin and others are read. Second and Third Terms, Sophomore.

The Oration.—A study of the nature, structure and types of the oration. Some of the great masterpieces of oratory, with something of the circumstances of their delivery, are studied. Third Term, Sophomore.

Poetics.—A study of the theory, nature and structure of poetry. Lectures, exercises, references, readings, and Seminar. Elective, First Term, Senior.

The Drama.—A study of the law and technique of the drama. The structure of the Shakespearean plays are specially studied, with references to other masterpieces of the drama. Lectures on the modern play. Elective, Second Term, Senior.

English Reading.—Every student stands an examination each term on at least one masterpiece selected from a prescribed course.

Elocution.—Individual drill is given the Freshmen and Sophomores in declamatory work. Their work in the weekly Rhetoricals partly determines the choice of speakers for the Prize Contest of Commencement Week.

BIOLOGY

Prof. M. C. Findlay

General Biology.—This occupies two hours a week during the fall and winter terms of the Junior year. The method of study is three-fold; first, dissections by each student and careful drawings of the same; second, reference reading on obscure points from the special science library, well equipped with the latest publications; third, lectures and quizzes. The purpose of the course is to familiarize the student with the general principles governing life and the development of organisms. Sedgwick and Wilson's General Biology is the text book.

2A. Zoology.—Three hours a week during the fall term of the Senior year. This course is confined to Insecta. The method of study is much the same as for Course 1. Needham's Lessons in Zoology and Comstock's Manual of Insects are the text-books.

2B. Zoology.—Five hours a week during the winter and spring terms of the Senior year. It is devoted to the comparative anatomy of vertebrates, with especial attention given to Histology and Embryology. Hertwig's Zoology and Marshall's "The Frog" give an outline for the work. Sterling's Histology and Marshall's Vertebrate Embryology are followed for the particulars on which they treat.

3A. Botany.—Five hours a week during the spring term of the Junior year. The Morphology and Physiology of Phaenogams are carefully studied. Bergen's Foundation of Botany and Key and Flora are used in the laboratory, coupled with references and directions.

3B. Botany.—Five hours a week during the fall term of the Senior year. The typical Cryptogams of this locality, together with the allied marine forms, are examined. Arthur, Barnes and Coulter's Plant Dissection, and Campbell's Structural and Systematic Botany furnish outlines for laboratory work. Reference reading and lectures are a large feature of this course.

4. Geology. Five hours a week during spring term of the Senior year. The formations and fossils of this locality are examined and compared with museum specimens. Le Conte's Elements of Geology is the text-book.

Courses 1, 2A, and 3A, are required of all students; Course 4 of those not electing Literature that term; Courses 2B and 3B are elective. One catalogue hour in this department is reckoned as two in the laboratory.

A small laboratory fee is charged to defray the cost of material consumed and as rental for microscopes and dissecting instruments.

MATHEMATICS AND ASTRONOMY

Prof. A. M. Mattoon

Trigonometry.—The Freshmen study Mattoon's Essentials of Plane and Spherical Trigonometry during the fall term. This is followed by drill of the Theory of Equations, with special reference to preparation for the higher work in this department. This occupies two days per week during the winter term.

Geometry.—During the spring term of the Freshman year, the treatment of straight lines and the essential properties of the conic sections and several of the higher plane curves are completed, employing Nichols' Analytic Geometry.

Calculus.—For two terms of the Sophomore year Osborne's Differential and Integral Calculus may be elected. The rules for differentiation and integration are demonstrated, and their application to a wide range of practical examples is illustrated in the work of the class room. One day each week during the last term of Calculus is taken from that subject and given to the study of the instruments in the Observatory, with special reference to the mathematical principles involved in their use.

Surveying and Civil Engineering.—In the fall term, the Juniors may elect Surveying and Civil Engineering. The department is equipped with a transit, Y-level, railroad and Gunter's chains, steel tape and leveling rod. The principles of land surveying, irrigation, water-works and railroad engineering engage the attention of the class in actual field work, and the reduction of the field notes to plots drawn to scale.

General Astronomy.—Required during the spring term of the Junior year. Most of the subject matter in Young's text is covered and this is supplemented by transit and equatorial telescope observations, taken in the Observatory. Here a foundation is laid for the more rigid mathematical work done later in the course.

Practical Astronomy.—The Seniors may elect Practical Astronomy in the fall term. Standard text books by several authors are in the hands of the class, to guide the observations, and the students determine time, latitude and longitude, and compute current eclipses and occultations of stars. Under the head of "Buildings" will be found a description of the excellent equipment of the Charles Smith Scott Observatory, the apparatus of which is specially for use in instructing classes in Astronomy, both general and practical.

The Latin course presupposes a thorough grounding in Roman History and in Latin grammar, the acquisition of a good working vocabulary, and a reasonable facility in Latin translation and composition. The authors chosen afford a comprehensive survey of Latin Literature at its best; they illustrate both the social and political institutions of the Romans, and the phonetic and syntactic development of their language.

Freshman Reading.—Livy, Bks. XXI, XXII, Odes of Horace, De Senectute of Cicero. With Livy, special study is made of Roman political history and of rhetorical effects. With Horace we study historical and literary allusions, poetic imagery and phraseology, points of similarity and variance to English lyrics. The term in De Senectute involves further Latin prose writing, biographical studies of great Romans and investigation of religious ideas and ceremonies.

Sophomore Reading.—The Latin section of Sophomores reads Letters of Cicero, one or two plays of Plautus, Satires and Epistles of Horace. Special studies, first term: Roman politics in last age of Republic; second term: syntactic and phonetic development of Latin; third term: Roman social life and philosophy.

Six elective courses in Latin are offered throughout the Junior and Senior years, in alternating groups of three.

In 1904-5 the subjects were Lucretius and Epicureanism. History of Roman Literature with comparative study of English counterparts to the Latin authors. Teachers' training course reviewing elements of grammar and studying methods of dealing with academic Latin classes. In 1905-6 the subjects offered are the Silver age, with reading of Juvenal and Tacitus; Roman Law, lectures with readings from the Institutes of Gaius and Justinian. Lectures on Comparative Grammar with special reference to Latin phonology.

Throughout the four years much use is made of the excellent reference library, and lectures on antiquities and archeology are illustrated with photographs or stereopticon.

GREEK

Prof. R. V. Magers

The aim of this course is to develop familiarity with the beauties and niceties of the Greek language, stimulate an interest in the art and literature of the Greeks by giving some acquaintance with them at first hand, and thus contribute to the general culture, as well as the information, of the student.

Freshman Year.—Greek is required throughout the year. During the first and second terms Homer's Iliad forms the basis of the study. Inquiry is made into subjects connected with the Epic literature, Homeric life, etc. Jebb's "Homer" is regularly studied in connection with the Iliad. The third term is divided between readings from Lucian's "Timon the Misanthrope" and Dion Chrysostom's "Hunters of Eubœa." Incidental readings from the New Testament are also included.

Sophomore Year—Required of students not taking German or Latin. In the first term, the orations of Lysias are read. Second term, the "Antigone" of Sophocles, together with considerable investigation of Greek Tragedy, and subjects connected therewith. Occasionally plays or selected scenes from plays, are produced publicly by the class. In 1903–04 the "Electra" of Sophocles was thus used: in 1904-05 the "Orestes" of Euripides. Third term, Plato's "Apology" and "Crito" are read, and special attention is given to an investigation of Socrates' life and teachings.

Junior and Senior Years.—Electives are offered each term, and such courses as the following are found possible:

1. Greek Oratory.—Using the "Phillipics" of Demosthenes as a basis, but including lectures and research work.

2. Lyric Poetry.—Reading selections from various poets, lectures, and a comparative study of Greek and English lyrics.

3. Philosophy.—Particularly that of Socrates and the Sophists. Our library is well equipped for such work. Xenophon's "Memorabilia" is used to good advantage as a text in connection with this course.

4. Tragedy.—Reading, especially Aeschylus or Euripides, to supplement the work done with Sophocles in the Sophomore year.

5. History.—Particularly of the Periclean age and the Peloponnesian war, Xenophon's "Hellenica" as the text.

6. A General View of Greek Literature.—Using Jebbs' Primer as a basis, with lectures and readings from various Greek authors, both in translations and in the original.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN LITERATURE

Prof. W. Hawthorne Cooper

The courses in Literature are designed to give the student both a spiritual and a critical appreciation of "what great men and women thought and felt, and then wrote down in good prose or beautiful poetry in the English language," and to assist them in tracing the great movements—social, ethical and æsthetic—of English and American life and thought from Chaucer to the present.

JUNIORS. First Term: (Required) History of English Literature.—In this course, simultaneously with the development of English Literature, are studied the lives and masterpieces of the most prominent English authors. Text: Simonds' "History of English Literature."

Second Term: (Required)—The work of the first term is continued, and special emphasis is laid upon Literary criticism.

Third Term: (Elective)—Shakespeare. A critical and sympathetic study of the Comedies and Dramas of this master is designed to lead the student to an appreciation of the qualities—dramatic, æsthetic, and ethical—that have made Shakespeare King of Poets and of Dramatists.

SENIORS. First Term: (Elective)—The American Short Story. The student is required to deduce the laws and technique of the short story from his findings upon examination of a prescribed list of the best American Short Stories. A number of "beginnings" and "endings," two original short stories in the term, and a Thesis at the end of the term, are required of each student.

Second Term: (Elective) History of American Literature.—In this course less time is given to the study of the development of American Literature than was given to the development of English Literature, and more time is spent with special authors such as Irving, Poe, Hawthorne and Emerson. Text: Newcomer's "American Literature."

Third Term: (Elective)—A comparative study is made of the leading Victorian poets: Tennyson and Browning.

BIBLICAL HISTORY AND PRACTICAL CHRISTIAN TRAINING

Dr. S. L. McAfee

Instruction in this department has a two-fold aim: first, to give a comprehensive understanding of the word of God, and second, to impart a ready skill in the use of this knowledge in the various lines of Christian activity.

The course is preceded by two years of preparation in the Academy.

New Testament History.—The historical connection between the Old Testament and the New; the life of Christ and the History of the Apostolic Church.

Biblical Introduction and Analysis.—H. F. Sells' Bible Study by Books is used as a text and supplemented with lectures.

Sabbath School Work.—History of the origin and growth of the modern Sabbath School, its government, forms of organization; duties and qualification of officers and teachers; Institutes, and Conventions. The instruction is given by lectures with class drill.

Organized Christian Work.—The aim is to gain an intelligent apprehension of the various organized agencies through which Christianity is advanced. Its starting point is the church, its composition, its unity, its true succession. The various forms of organization it has assumed are considered, special prominence being given to the Presbyterian Polity. The agencies which the church has employed in the prosecution of its various lines of work, local, denominational and inter-denominational, are studied.

PHILOSOPHY

Profs. Silas Evans and J. E. McAfee

The aim of the courses in Philosophy is to help students to think clearly and consistently upon the problems of life and of thought.

History of Philosophy.—Two hours, first and second terms, Senior year. In this course the development of thought is traced from the ancient Greeks to our own times. Schwegler's and Weber's Histories of Philosophy are used as text books, supplemented by lectures and selections from the works of representative men of different periods.

Psychology.—Three hours, first term, Senior year. This study presupposes a considerable knowledge of the structure and functions of the brain and nervous system. The work is carried on both from the psycological and physiological point of view. No laboratory experiments are undertaken, but the results of the best experimental work are examined and discussed. Text-books, lectures and references.

Logic.—Three hours, second term, Senior year. Special attention is given to inference, hypothesis, judgment, the detection of fallacies, and the relation between the inductive and deductive methods of reasoning. Creighton's and Jevon's texts are used.

Metaphysics.—Three hours, second term, Senior year. The different theories and methods of Metaphysics are examined and criticised, followed by a rational explanation of the general nature of our experience of the world. Text-books, lectures and references.

Moral Philosophy.—Three hours, third term, Senior year. The course begins with a brief historical sketch of the most influential ethical theories. A more detailed study and criticism is made of the Evolution and Utilitarian theories. The Intuitional theory is dogmatically stated and defended. Calderwood's Handbook, supplemented by lectures, form the basis of the work.

Evidences of Christianity.—Minton's "Christianity Supernatural" is used, with lectures. Theses are required. References to other accessible works are given, and the more modern anti-Christian objections are pointed out.

DEPARTMENT OF MUSIC

Mrs. S. L. McAfee
Miss Margaret A. Williams
Miss Emilie Hansen

The work of this department has been enlarged and improved during the year. Its scope is both individual and general. Its aim is to enable students to gain a mastery of voice and instruments as a part of a liberal education. Its studios and practice-rooms are in Mackay Building and the several Homes of the Campus. Twelve pianos and five organs are in the use of the department.

Instrumental Music

Mrs. S. L. McAfee

This department meets the needs of those who wish to pursue a course in Piano or Organ Music. Particular attention is given to thoroughness in principles in order that pupils may early experience the practical value of that which is acquired.

While studies and exercises are pursued during the entire course they are varied by introducing such selections from good composers as will tend to the greatest advancement of the pupils.

Lessons one hour in length.

Instruments for practice 50 cts. per month.

All pupils are expected to practice at least one hour each day. Term of 20 lessons, $10.00.

Voice

Margaret A. Williams

This department offers to students a thorough course in Voice Culture. The voice is the most wonderful of instruments and needs careful and persistent training.

The student with a voice finds many avenues of usefulness and pleasure open to him during his college course.

Those connected with the Lucerne and Calliopean Glee Clubs, receive instruction in Chorus work during the year, and have many opportunities to sing in public.

F. Sieber's School of Singing and Elementary Vocalises for beginners, and Marchesi Method of Singing and Vocalises for more advanced students, are used.

TUITION

Term of twenty lessons, one-half hours—$10.

Instrumental Music

Emilie Hansen

This department aims for an appreciation of the highest in music; to cultivate the student's ear for the best of literature and train his ear and fingers to carry out his ideals.

A thoroughly classical course is maintained, yet each student is educated individually, and such studies assigned as best fit his special needs.

Students' recitals are given during the year, as an important part of musical training.

Instruction is offered class or individuals, in Harmony and Composition.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The Academy is under the same general management as the College. It has for its object the thorough preparation of its students for pursuing the College course, as outlined on the preceding pages, consequently it differs materially from the High Schools in the course offered. It has a separate corps of instructors, who are in constant touch with the heads of the corresponding departments in College. The instruction is given in the same building with the college classes, thereby giving the students advantage of contact with the college students and professors. The library privileges are extended to them on the same basis as to the college students. They have their own literary societies, which hold weekly meetings.

TUITION

First Years	$5.00 per term	$15.00
Second Years	5.00 per term	15.00
Third Years	7.50 per term	22.50
Fourth Years	7.50 per term	22.50

COURSE OF INSTRUCTION

The work of the Academy has been outlined with great care, and covers a course of four years. All subjects not deemed necessary for a special preparation for the college course have been eliminated.

ADMISSION

To enter the First year, students must have completed all grammar grade work as is usually required in our best graded schools. A certificate of admission to any high school maintaining a three or four years' course, will be accepted. Students holding teacher's certificates will be admitted wi hout examination. Applicants for admission to other years must present certificate or pass examination on all subjects below the year for which they apply. The acceptance of all credits is contingent upon the quality of work done by the students after matriculation.

Written examinations are held at the close of each term, the results of which are given to the student in written form. A grade of 75 per cent is required for passing the first and second years, of 60 per cent for work of the third and fourth years, and an average of 70 per cent on the third and fourth years for graduation.

All important rules are rigorously proved, and it is the constant aim to develop the power of thinking in general terms.

Geometry.—Wentworth's Revised Geometry is used as a text book throughout the fourth year. In Solid Geometry demonstrations are made from goniostat models and a pendant globe, as well as from blackboard figures. Many original exercises are given.

Attention is called repeatedly to the various methods of reasoning employed in the demonstrations. Thus it is the aim to make this study of mathematics worth while both for its own sake and for the sake of mental power and method.

LATIN

Prof. W. A. Cook and Prof. J. W. Stephens

Attention is given throughout the course to forms and constructions; principal parts of verbs; English derivatives; prose construction based on the text read; and sight reading.

Such references are made to Roman history, manners and customs as are necessary to a proper understanding and appreciation of the authors read.

First Year.—The entire year is given to the mastery of the elements of the language. Five hours a week.

Second Year.—First term, Viri Romae; second and third terms, Cæsar's Gallic War I–IV. Four hours a week.

Three Years' Course.—A three years' course is offered to students of good ability that are prepared to enter Second year with the exception of Latin. This class completes the elements in two terms; gives one term to Viri Romae; devotes the Third Year to Caesar, Sallust and Cicero: and in the Fourth Year is merged into the regular class.

This class is organized only on condition that there is a sufficient number of qualified applicants to warrant it.

GREEK

Grammar and syntax are thoroughly studied; the syntax study accompanied by prose composition based on the Anabasis. Herodotus.—The third term is devoted to Herodotus, with special study of the Ionic Dialect; the formation of words; collateral reading from Grote's History.

During the second term, fourth year, each student memorizes an assigned passage of the Anabasis and takes part in the preliminary contest in Greek Declamation. At the final contest the Arthur S. Cooley prizes are awarded. (See list of prizes.)

A written test on the verb is held each term.

Miss Ida E. Stem

Myers' Ancient History is used. The effort in this work is to introduce the student to the lives of the ancient peoples, specially with reference to their social, industrial, and political customs.

SCIENCE

Prof. Harlan A. Hepfinger

For the ensuing year, work in this department will be along Biological lines. The elementary forms of life will be considered during the first and second terms as a basis for an intelligent study of Human Physiology, Anatomy and Hygiene during the third term. Individual work will be required in the laboratories of the college. These laboratories are specially well equipped for this work. Study of the third term is aided by the constant use of a manikin, skeleton, charts, casts, and a fine collection of microscopic slides.

MUSIC

Miss Margaret A. Williams

Vocal music is required one hour a week throughout the entire Academic course. Instruction is given in the elements of vocal culture, ear training and sight singing.

First year.—Embraces the rudiments of music, written and vocal work in nine Major keys, with scale and interval drill and introduction of chromatics. Two part Chorus work.

STUDENT RELIGIOUS ORGANIZATION

The active religious life of the student body is promoted by the different organizations among them.

The Young Men's Christian Association maintains regular meetings and has a membership of 75. The Young Woman's Christian Association meetings are well attended and are very helpful. The membership is 147. The volunteer Band and Mission Study Class hold regular meetings. The former has a membership of 10, the latter of 40. Both organizations are under the helpful care of Dr. A. L. Wolfe, who meets with them for conference and study.

PUBLICATIONS

The Park Review is a quarterly magazine of Park College, edited by Dr. Thomas Gregory Burt, Department of History and German, assisted by several members of the Faculty. It is literary, historical, philosophical and educational in its character, and has made a place for itself in the estimation of the student body and the faculty, and has a growing circulation among the friends of the College.

The Stylus, published under the direction of the Senior class of the College, is distinctly the student organ. It is now in its ninth year, and is growing in circulation and influence as a factor for good. The literary productions are of a high order and pride is taken to make it helpful to all who read it.

BOARDING PUPILS

All students, whether in College or Academy classes, who board in the homes in the village, are under the direction of the Faculty. Boarding places must be approved by the Faculty. They are amenable to the Faculty, and will secure permits before leaving the village.

The use of tobacco, liquor, cards or any game of chance, and profane language, are forbidden. Each pupil is expected to attend preaching service and Sabbath School each Sabbath.

Clubs, either of men or women, are permitted on certain conditions.

FOUNDERS' DAY

May 12th is Founders' Day. The event was publicly celebrated May 8-12, 1904, by the induction into office of President-elect, Lowell M. McAfee, LL. D., as the second President of Park College.
